Standard	Pg 42	Kenya power firm seeks fuel after drought
		Kenyan power generating firm Iberafrica plans to buy 320,000 tonnes of heavy fuel oil for its 110 megawatt power plant in the capital for use over the next 24 months. Several parts of East Africa's largest economy which relies on hydro power for its electricity are experiencing severe drought, which could possibly lead to the use of diesel to generate power.

Nation	Pg 17	City Abattoir converts waste into green energy
		The Dagoretti slaughterhouse is now more than a source of meat - it is a source of energy. A biogas plant has been opened at Nyongara to make use of the large amount of animal waste. It produces about 30 kilowatts of power, which are used to light up the abattoir.
