Kenya Times	21	Power challenges mar flourishing S.Africa economy South Africa has for years been a beacon of hope illuminating the continent but recently it has been facing an energy crisis, which threatens to overshadow the economic achievements of the post-apartheid government. There are serious worries that the power crisis may block out the World Cup, which is expected to be hosted in 2010. The power cuts have caused havoc for every industry and so far emigration lawyers and companies selling diesel charged generators seem to be the only beneficiaries of the situation.
